

The topic of my website is Resident Evil which is one of if not my favorite game franchise made by Capcom. It is about an evil corporation that experiments with and creates bioweapons and you play as a variety of different characters throughout the games that let you uncover secrets about the corporation. In these games you also have to explore different settings in order to find resources and different key items that let you escape and progress through the story. These games were very influential to the survival horror genre when they first came out and redesigned third person shooters as well. The purpose of my site is to explain what Resident Evil is to someone who doesn't know anything about it but wants to learn. I included backgrounds and overviews of the most popular games and some insights into who the characters are as well as included some of the most popular audios that have come from the games. I implemented transition and transformation features as well as HTML5 Media Tags for the audios. I only covered 3 of the games in the series but they are the most popular and influential ones. I also tried to explain some of the real life backstory of the franchise and how it recently got repopularized.
